Brian Cook, a curator at the British Museum, has said that the museum would not bid at the auction, though it would include vases from the 4th century B.C. that the museum would like to acquire. Elizabeth Goring a curator at the Royal Museum of Scotland in Edinburgh, said the vases may have been brought to London without official Italian consent.

Labor Keeps Seat in Special U.K. Vote

NEWCASTLE UPON TYNE, England (AP) — Britain's opposition Labor Party retained the parliamentary seat of Tyne Bridge, an area that has been hit hard by recession and unemployment, in results of a special election announced early Friday.

But with a 38 percent turnout by voters, the Labor Party failed to gain the sweeping victory that it had hoped would set it on the path to victory in the next general election, to be held by mid-1988. The centrist alliance of Liberals and Social Democrats came in second in Thursday's voting, and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party trailed badly

The special election was held because of the death of the former holder of the seat, Harry Cowans. The Labor candidate, David Clelland, received 13,517 votes, or 57.9 percent, to retain the seat for his party.

WASHINGTON - In recent weeks both houses of the U.S. Congress have passed legislation that would require a balanced budget within five years. But they have also adopted farm bills for the next four years that exceed the lawmakers' own budget targets by several billion dollars.

In addition, despite all the ora-tory about reducing the national deficit, the House Ways and Means Committee approved a proposal that would slash personal income taxes by $140 billion and raise corporate taxes by about the same amount but would do nothing to close a budget gap that threatens to soar past $200 billion this year.

To many lawmakers, these measures demonstrate that Congress is canght in "a web of contradictions," as Representative William B. Richardson, a Democrat of New Mexico, put it. Legislators seem perfectly willing to cast inconsistent votes and approve policies that lead in different directions.

"We've developed a legislative schizophrenia, in an effort to bal-ance off these conflicting urgen-cies," said Senator Jim Sasser, a Democrat of Tennessee. "What you're seeing is people passing a hot potato back and forth."

"It would blind you to the needs of your constituents and to changing times," he added. "I don't think there's a particular merit to consistency as long as you don't compromise your basic principles."

But other legislators are alarmed at the trend they see developing on Capitol Hill Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan, a Democrat of New York who voted against both the balanced budget and the farm bill, said: "What we're trying to do is profoundly corrupting. This is frittering away the credibility of the Senate, It's just too obvious."

The British decision brought ex-pressions of understanding from the Reagan administration in Washington, which agreed with Britain that a Western drive for Third World imitiatives against a Britain that a Western drive for free press, human rights and West-reform over the past two years had failed to bring sufficient change.

West Germany and France, two of Britain's senior European Community partners, disagreed, saying there were clear signs of progress in reforming the agency.

West Germany, followed by Japan and the Netherlands, had threatened earlier to review membership in the organization. But a Foreign Ministry spokes-man in Bonn said his country had been encouraged to remain a member by decisions at UNESCO's General Conference last month in Sofia that showed a willingness to achieve reforms.

"Those decisions can only be put into practice from within," the spokesman said. Japan also expressed regret at Britain's decision, and there has been no response by the Dutch.

UNESCO's director-general, Amadou Mahtar M'Bow, a Senegalese whose management has been the butt of much Western criticism. noted that Britain had been a party to the consensus at Sofia.

Some Western diplomats said Britain's departure was "a slap in the face" for the controversial Mr. M'bow and had reduced his chances of being re-elected for a third term in 1987.

The decline of the OAS frequently is attributed to its cumbersome secretariat in Washington, where elderly diplomats, international junists and a staff amassed over nearly four decades often seem far removed from the region's political turmoil and social stresses.

The reforms also will allow the council to provide peacekeeping services, which now are blocked by the refusal of the United States and 20 other member countries to ratify a treaty aimed at developing peaceful solutions to regional conflicts.

But these small reforms did not increase the expectations of Latin American foreign ministers who came to the conference in the hope of revitalizing the organization. Their unanimous view was that the big issues will continue to be conducted outside the OAS in the immediate future.

Efforts to bring about a Central American peace and security arrangement will continue through the Contadora Group, which is made up of Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela and Panama. The ministers of these countries agreed to persevere in mediation efforts, al-

The Contadora Group also called a new meeting of the Central American countries for later this month to consider the draft of a security treaty.

The issue of Latin America's foreign debt remains almost entirely outside the OAS forum, although Secretary of State George P. Shultz devoted almost an entire speech to economic matters in addressing the assembly Monday.

For the major Latin American debtors, who owe a total of $380 billion, the forum for debt discussions is the Cartagena Group of 11 countries. Meeting in Cartagena almost two years ago, the group called for a "political" dialogue with the creditor governments.

The creditors have refused to negotiate outside the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, where the large, industrial

Haiti Closes a Radio Station

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti Authorities have shut down a Roman Catholic radio station that reported on recent unrest and violence in Haiti, and Haitian police have arrested a former government minister in a raid on his home.

Interior Minister Jean-Marie Chanoine said that Radio Soleil was shut down Thursday because the church-operated station, despite a news ban, had broadcast information that "would tend to excite and alarm the populace."

POSITIONS

Mr. Chanoine said Radio Soleil had been temporarily closed be-cause it had violated Haitian press Authorities imposed the news ban last week after two churchoperated radio stations, including Radio Soleil, reported on growing unrest and anti-government demonstrations in Gonaives, scene of food riots last year.

Radio Soleil did not broadcast news following the ban, but did transmit several sermons urging youth to "stand firm."

NEW YORK — The National Gallery of Art bought Rem-brandt Peale's "Rubens Peale with a Geranium" Thursday for $4.07 million, including sales charge — a record auction price for a painting by an American artist.

Peale, who lived in Philadelphia, portrayed his bespectacled younger brother, a botanist, with his right hand on a large potted geranium. According to a Peale family story, the plant was the first of its kind in America. The 1801 painting, in oil on canvas, was sold by Pauline Woolworth of New York, widow of Christie's sale of 176 Old Master the retailing heir Norman B. Wool-

George Washington and Thomas Jefferson, was the son of Charles Willson Peale, a founder of early American art galleries and museums and one of the most influential American painters of his time.

The painting was one of almost 300 American paintings, drawings and sculptures sold at Sotheby's.

Maurice Denis (1870-1943) is, as Belinda Thomson observes in her catalog forward, better known in Britain as an aesthetic theorist than as an artist. Yet, as a show at IPL Fine Arts makes clear, he was a painter of quality and understanding. The oils include some fine Breton images of the 1890s. There is an excellent early pastel, "Meison en-cadree d'arbres" (c. 1898), a sunset piece called "The Arc de Triomphe at St. Remy" (c. 1926), some tre-mendons charcoal and pastel undes and "Les dansouses," a study for his decorative panel "La Musique Profane" for the Théâtre de Chail-

Tom Reed is a young painter one year out of art school, who has passed the interval in photography and film, the aesthetic problems of which have influenced his painting. For his first London one-man show he has accepted the invitation of a Chelsea furniture design studio, Carew-Jones. Much care has been taken in mounting the show, and the paintings combine, in the artist's words, "the speed and perspective of photography, the color and decoration of painting."

That has all changed now. The elegantly restored exterior has been given a snappy modern interior whose stepped acoustic ceiling can be extended into the stage area for concerts. Now it remains only to raise artistic standards to match. for there is a tendency in Hannover's opera ensemble - full of older artists who should have retired to smaller roles some time ago — to take the attitude that "We're O.K., the rest of the world is crazy." dumb. They surely knew that the truth about their mistreatment of Andrei Sakharov would emerge if his wife, Yelena Bonner, were allowed to travel to the West. Thus the ugly story of forced feeding and faked telegrams has one compensation. It signifies a calculation that Miss Bonner's journey to Italy is less harmful to Soviet interests than her cruel detention in what the couple call "the black hole" the closed city of Gorki.

ignites a spark of hope for other dissidents. The controlling truth is that the West's concern for human rights must play on the Soviet rulers' periodic desire to exploit that concern.

This seems an opportune time. Miss Bonner was finally permitted medical treatment abroad because Mikhail Gorbachev thought the gesture would improve his image at the Geneva summit conference. He was correct: it did. He should be encouraged to follow up with more such "humanitarian" deeds and unlock the doors that shame the Soviet system.

There have been a few other signs of relenting. With a seignorial flourish before the summit. Mr. Gorbachev ended years of separation for some Soviet subjects married to Americans. Renewed immigration of Soviet Jews to Israel remains only a rumor, but an exit visa

The Kremlin's masters are ruthless but not has apparently been given to Eliahu Essas, a umb. They surely knew that the truth about mathematician who first applied in 1973. This follows a plea on his behalf by Edgar Bronfman, president of the World Jewish Congress, who visited Moscow in September.

Every dissident who leaves has a dreadful tale to tell; that is the cost of opening up. Miss Bonner was allowed out for three months on condition that she grant no interviews. But her family in the United States is not bound. So it is now known that for 207 days in the last 18 months, the Nobel physicist was separated from his wife and fed forcibly to foil his hunger strike on her behalf. His jailers doctored messages and videotapes purporting to show that all was well with him. Even so, Western protest surely mitigated the comple's plight and can continue to influence Soviet behavior.

In pleading the cause of human rights to General Secretary Gorbachev at Geneva, President Reagan seems to have indicated that he is more interested in progress than in propaganda, and is willing to confine his pressure to private diplomacy. That is not always the most effective approach, but it can be when the two governments are moving toward easier rela-tions on other fronts. If Mr. Gorbachev takes that offer to heart, he will recognize the benefits of decency and open his doors wider.

A Young Old Quebec

The Ouebec election closes a 20-year cycle of French-Canadian separatism that in the 1970s threatened to break up Canada. The separatist impulse has probably not vanished forever. In one form or another it is inherent in French Canadians' sense of being a special people with their own culture, very different from that of the rest of North America. But Quebec learned in the 1970s that the separatist movement carries a high economic cost as businesses depart and investment declines. With an unemployment rate now over 11 per-cent, the province's voters have decided to give priority to development and jobs.

Separatism became a political force amid the extremely rapid social change of the 1960s. French Canada has been through a transformation in the last two decades that most of English-speaking North America took several merations to traverse. In 1960 most of French Canada was turned inward toward a deeply traditional community life. Except for a small elite, most French Canadians had hardly more than primary education and earned their livings in farming and blue-collar jobs. Then, as the education system began to expand, young people reached out for wider opportunities. But everything of importance seemed to be run by people who spoke English.

Over the years since then, young people have poured into the province's new colleges, going into technical fields and business administration. Quebec's society no longer splits neatly into English-speaking professional and managerial classes and a French-speaking working class. The upper levels of the big corporations are no longer so alien to ambi-tious young Quebecois, and even among French Canadian nationalists the question currently is not to get control of the corporations but to make them grow more powerfully and generate more employment.

Nearly a year ago, its membership falling, the ruling Parti Québécois abandoned the goal of national independence that it had upheld since the late 1960s. It now leaves office to be replaced by Monday's winners, the Liberal Party. But the voters did an extraordinary thing. They defeated the Liberal Party's leader, Robert Bourassa, in his own district. Mr. Bourassa had also been the Liberal leader and the province's premier before the Parti Onebecois came to power, and evidently he was too sharp a reminder of the way things used to be. It seems that the voters knew exactly what they wanted: set aside the separatist cause, but not turn politics backward or to reverse the great changes in French Canadian life during the vears when the separatists were in power

Other Opinion

Another Blow to UNESCO

No doubt it seemed like a good idea at the time a year ago, when the necessary notice was given, but confirmation of Britain's withdrawal from UNESCO managed to seem both sad and petty. It was the greater shock of the American departure a year earlier, rather than the British "me too," which prompted the controversial agency to make a start on undeniably necessary and long overdue reform. But, like most international bodies, even the most efficient and ideologically unexceptionable, UNESCO moves exceedingly slowly, a phenomenon related to the number of members.

The case for going can be summarized in the one word inefficiency. If this is the criterion for membership of international bodies, we should logically cancel our subscription to almost everything, UNESCO, like the United Nations itself and many another grouping of nations, is as effective as its members, collectively and individually, allow it to be. Its poor management, its vagneness and the extremely high proportion of funds spent on its Paris headquarters are grounds for censure and pro-test, but in these respects it is different only in degree from other forums. The charge that it has become highly politicized is made only by those who disagree with the politics involved.

The withdrawal of first the major contributor and now of the founder of UNESCO is doubtless meant to teach the rest of the world a lesson. Unfortunately, it is up to the rest of the world to decide what lesson it draws, and we can be sure it will not be flattering to the Anglo-Saxon duumvirate.

- The Guardian (London). UNESCO is immune to essential reform as a wild animal is immune to domesticity. It might in theory be possible even to change the state of affairs in which 70 percent of UNESCO's budget is spent at the organization's headquarters in Paris. But still UNESCO would be dominated by Third World countries who. intermittently aided and abetted by the Soviet bloc, would continue to propose measures we would sometimes find irritating or distasteful. This being so, it would be dishonest to suggest that Britain (at any rate under a Conservative government) is likely to return to UNESCO in the foreseeable future.

- The Daily Telegraph (London).

Pressure from Washington apparently prevailed. Like a knit sweater unraveling strand by strand, UNESCO's situation resembles, mutatis mutandis, that of the League of Nations before World War II. The defunct agency may now inspire a stately dance whose funereal strains could well reverberate throughout the UN system. Some American adversaries of the United Nations openly hope so. France well knows that the defection of the two principal Anglo-Saxon countries risks ealarging the influence of Moscow and the more anti-Western regimes of the Third World. So it is surprising that France — honored 40 years ago as the world's choice to host UNESCO's headquarters, London being among the candidates then - has yet to launch the major initiative that is required to save the international cultural and scientific organization.

It's now or never. France might, with much care, suggest quietly to Amadou Mahtar M'Bow that he take the courageous step of resigning before his term expires in 1987. Whether or not he shares responsibility for the present situation, the director-general has become the focus of so much controversy that it is hard to see how UNESCO can be salvaged with him still on board.

American Liberals Prefer Distant Causes

WASHINGTON — The United States has come to a curious crossroads in foreign policy. The Reagan doctrine proclaims American support for anti-Communist revolutions around the world. For practical purposes this means, in descending order of remoteness from the United States: in Afghanistan, Cambodia, Angola and Nicaragna. Congressional liberals seem to have responded, They will support half.

The scorecard reads like this: Afghanistan: No argument. For liberals and conservatives, as for the mujahidin, it is holy war.

 Cambodia: The prime advocate of overt military aid to the non-Communist guerrillas is the leading liberal foreign policy thinker in Congress, Representative Stephen Solarz Angola: Congress is soon to vote on the question of aid to Jonas Savimbi's UNITA rebels. The strongest opposition comes from House liberals led by Representative Solarz. Nicaragua: Liberals overwhelmngly oppose aid to the "contras."

What is curious about this lineap is that liberals, by reputation, are guid-ed more by considerations of human-rights and democratic forms than conservatives. Yet, compared to the insurgencies they oppose, the insur-gencies they favor are likely to pro-duce regimes far less disposed toward human rights or democratic forms. In Cambodia, America supports good guys, but they are completely dominated by much more powerful allies made up of very bad guys, the Khmer Rouge. If the rebels triumphed tomorrow it would be Pol Pot, or his disciples, who likely would rule. When Pol Pot last ruled he proved himself the greatest murderer since Hitler, Stalin and Mao, andthey had advantages of scale.

By Charles Krauthammer

In Afghanistan, there is much to be said for the courage and patriotism of the mujahidin. There is less to be said for their interest in the theory and practice of democracy. Were America's side to win, it would probably produce a regime politically, as geographically, somewhere between the dictatorship of Pakistan and the Islamic fanaticism of Iran.

Next to their Asian brothers-inrevolution, an Angola under Mr. Savimbi or a Nicaragua under Arturo Cruz looks positively Jeffersonian. Thus, purely from the point of view of political morality — of what life for the people will be like if America's side wins — support for the Asian half of Reagan doctrine and opposition to the rest is incoherent.

Accordingly, in support of this peculiar policy, and in preparation for the uncoming vote on Angolan aid, a search for coherence has been undertaken. This is what it has turned up. International law: Some argue that because Cambodia and Afghanistan have been invaded by foreign troops, only there is support for the insurgents justified. It is not clear, however, why the address of one's oppressor should be decisive in deciding whether resistance is legitimate or whether it deserves support. Poland was not invaded by General Jaruzelski. Is resistance to his rule

Moreover, this is a strange argument to make in defense of an Ango-lan regime propped up by 30,000 Cuban troops — which makes Angola one of last sub-Saharan countries that can be said to be white-ruled. The armed foreigners in Luanda will undoubtedly claim that they were invited by the local pseudo-regime. But so can the Soviets in Kabul and the Vietnamese in Phnom Pehn. Etiquette demands it nowadays: Occupation is by invitation only.

• Apartheid: A more serious and any less deserving for that fact?

special charge against Mr. Savimbi is that he takes aid from South Africa. No one says that he has any sympathy for apartheid, because that would be absurd. Mr. Savimbi is a lifelong black nationalist who has been fight black nationalist who has been fight-ing one or another form of colonial-ism for 20 years, including many years spent fighting Portuguese colo-nialism when it was supported by South Africa. The help he gets from South Africa is a matter of pure convenience. Or, more accurately, necessity: For 10 years the other potential source of help, the United States, was cut off by the Clark amendment. Mr. Savimbi had to choose between clean hands and survival. To the dismay of some, he chose the latter. But he is no more an agent of South Africa than Washington was of Louis XVI. Mr. Savimbi takes Pretoria's aid because he has no choice. The United States can give him the choice. American aid could replace Pretoria's aid. It could even be conditioned on Mr. Savimbi's dissociation from South Africa. That would free him of the South African taint. Which suggests that there must be yet another principle underlying the selectivity of the liberal response to the Reagan doctrine.

• Distance: What distinguishes the insurgencies of Cambodia and Afghanistan is that they are the farthest away. Far enough away that their true nature does not come into (American) focus too easily. It is much easier to support out-of-sight intervention, wars whose violence is far beyond the ken of American cameras and American consciousness.

Representative Solarz opposes the "global interventionism," as he calls it, of "the high priests and acolytes of the far right." Instead, it seems, the congressman from New York is for hemi-global interventionism: America will support any insurgent, provided he is more than eight time zones away. Call it the Solarz doctrine.

At Last a New Sense of Purpose in Europe

PARIS — The European Community has fi-nally decided to make a serious effort to pull itself together. After the Luxembourg summ last Monday and Tuesday, the government heads, who usually crow loudly when they have produced practically nothing, are being untypically modest about their agreement.

It is a good sign. At last they have accepted that moving on with European economic integration is more important than making headlines for domestic political kudos. It is in the underlying interest of the United States as well. A faltering Europe can only un-dermine America's position in the world, and a strong, healthy Europe can mean a better bal-anced and stronger alliance.

In January, Spain and Portugal will swell the Community's membership to 12 countries with 320 million people — most of Western Europe. At the Luxembourg summit the 10+2 set the end of 1992 as the deadline for making the common market live up to its name as a place where people, goods, money and services can move as freely as within a single country.

It is still a long way from a United States of Europe, the goal of the visionanies who set up the original six-member Community in 1957. The 10 could not even agree on a deadline for a common currency, although they promised to aim for it.

The goad in Luxembourg was not idealism but a despend on the realist of 10 more a desperate awakening to the reality of 10 years of economic stagnation, persistently rising un-employment (it now averages 11½ percent) and evidence that internal rivalries make the EuropeBy Flora Lewis ans incapable of keeping up with the United States and Japan in a high-tech world. Twenty-seven too European industrialists had petitioned the summit participants, pleading for them to get moving. There is a powerful business drive to integrate the market, just as businessmen in the late 1950s moved the Community shead of s timetable because they were more eager for s benefits and less fearful of the short-term disadvantages than were the politicians. When the common market was formed, it was mainly in response to the threats of the Cold War and the need for a safe framework within which West Germany could redevelop and rearm. The easing of outside pressures and the enduring tugs of nationalism braked the momentum. There seemed little hope that Europa, as the vision was called, would ever come any nearer unless an overwhelming new crisis forced a reaction.

There was then a relapse into uit-picking grandstanding, grab-bagging. It led to the futile kind of thinking which apparently brought Ronald Reagan to ask Mikhail Gorbachev to imagine "a threat to this world from another species from another planet." The president said, "Just think how easy his task and mine might be in these meetings ... We'd forget all the little local differences that we have between our countries and we would find out once and for all that we really are human beings here on this Earth together. Ironically, it is not a terrifying military or political threat that is knocking European heads together this time, but fear of gradual economic decline. And it is to the credit of the political leaders that at last they have accepted the need to act intelligently before the brink of disaster. They compromised on choosing their tools for what is bound to be a difficult, even painful task. Differences are still too great, mutual trust still too small and attachment to local habits and attitudes still too stubborn. So they proceed cantiously, without enthusiasm, without as much as they need in institutional change.

as they need in institutional change.

But they have changed their style. Greece's Andreas Papandreou dropped his bravura. Britain's Margaret Thatcher complained that in Parliament some committee of underlings would be doing the line-by-line drafting and haggling that kept heads of government up all night in Luxembourg, but she said that if the Community had to work that way, she would adapt and so always. work that way, she would adapt and go along. There was a new atmosphere and a new sense that the point is not to score points but to get an essential job done. Of course, there had been a lot of preparation, a lot of disappointments, a lot of intrigue and friction before they got this far. And of course, how far they really move Europe will depend on future behavior and their ability to keep the focus on the larger goal.

Still, it is encouraging to find that government leaders can look ahead without being driven by "another species from another planet" to see that their tasks absolutely require more cooperation. One surprising day, it becomes possible.

A Mongrel The House Can Adopt

By David S. Broder

WASHINGTON — Last May, when President Reagan's tax proposal was brand new, I applanded it and suggested four criteria by which congressional tax revision could be judged. As the House pre-pares to vote on the tax bill that came pares to vote on the tax bill that came out of the Ways and Means Committee, substantially revised from the Reagan proposal, let's see how it stacks up against those standards: the four Ps of poverty, progressavity, principle and productivity.

Poverty: Under the existing tax code, a family of four at the poverty level pays 10 5 percent of its income level pays 10.5 percent of its income in federal taxes — 2½ times as much as it did in 1978. The Reagan proposal aimed at taking the poor entirely off the tax rolls, and the Ways and Means hill does an even better job of assuring that. Some six million low-income households would be relieved of federal taxes, making the bill the biggest anti-poverty program in years and the best news for the working poor. Give it an A grade. Progressivity: The income tax is based on the idea that taxes should oaseu on the idea that taxes should increase with the ability to pay, but tax shelters and loopholes have seriously eroded that principle. The Reagan proposal shut down some of the tax-dodging devices in the present code but it provided a bonanza to the very rich, who would get the main benefits of his proposed marginal rate reductions. The Ways and Means bill still allows some big loop-holes, but it shifts the benefits significantly to the middle-income taxpayers. It cuts by 47 percent the aggregate tax breaks that Mr. Reagan proposed for the few who earn more than $200,000. It increases by 48 per-cent the gains for the $20,000-$75,000 group. It includes a minimum-tax payment provision for corporations and the wealthy which is tougher than what Mr. Reagan proposed.

Grade for progressivity: A-minus.

Principle: Neither the original Reagan proposal nor the Ways and Means bill avoided compromises aimed at garnering votes in Congress and/or defusing the opposition of potent lobbies, but both repair some of the more outrageous distortions of the existing code. On many issues, including mortgage interest and business entertainment deductions, Mr. tion which I missed last time. Reagan's approach appears more principled than the committee's But the Democrats - albeit for political reasons - are more respectful of the principle of federalism than was the president. The bill before the House rejects Mr. Reagan's effort to end the deductibility of state and local taxes, and thereby preserves a principle that has been a comerstone of the fiscal flock to wander around? You might with considerable interest. The recompact between Washington and have mentioned the likelihood of beviewer is entitled to her views, how-

Productivity: Given the realities of international competition, the effects of any tax law changes on the productivity of business must be given great weight. The Reagan proposal shifted the tax burden significantly from international temperature. The Western dividuals to corporations. The Ways and Means bill goes further. But even the latter would do no more than bring the corporate share of overall revenues back to the level of 1980. Selfishly, some business lobbies urge Congress to abandon the effort to improve the tax code. Many profitable businesses have managed to avoid paying any taxes since the extravagantly generous 1981 tax-cut bill took effect, now they are trying to protect that privileged position. But Republicans in the House make a valid point when they argue some of the corporate tax hikes sigmificantly increase the cost of investment. That is especially true for some of the capital-intensive, heavy indus-tries like steel that are belatedly try-ing to modernize. Although the bill is better than the present code for many small, emerging businesses and for the rapidly growing service sector that is the source of most new jobs, a grade of C seems about as high as it grade of C seems about as high as it deserves on this criterion.

Overall, the Ways and Mesas bill—like the original Reagan proposal—is a clear improvement as regards poverty, progressivity and principle. The potential effects on productivity are its main drawback.

Hence Resublicant in an electron.

House Republicans, in an alternative bill, show plausibly how to mitigate that problem. Their bill is unlikely to prevail in the House, but its that the individual tax cuts in the likely to prevail in the House, but its Ways and Means bill may go too far concepts will swely resurface in the Republican-controlled Senate, and industry has many friends on the Senate Finance Committee. Members of that committee are acutely conscious of the competition facing U.S. businesses in foreign trade.

The president is right in saying that the House should send its bill on to the Senate. House Democrats can feel justifiable pride that the Ways and Means Committee has made a good start toward a significant overall improvement in the tax code. House Republicans should remem ber that if they vote to kill the bill when their substitute fails, they will be gutting the principal policy initia-tive — and the only potential land-mark domestic achievement — of President Reagan's second term. That would be a sorry legacy for last year's landslide and a cynical sendoff for the 1986 campaign.

Reply to a Reviewer

I read Anita Desai's review (Nov. 8) of my book "Vengeance: India After the Assassination of Indira Gandhi" with considerable interest. The re-ever anti-Sikh they may be. She is also entitled to her view that my book was an effort to cash in on current American interest in India. Her books about India give the impression of being written for foreign andi-ences, too. What troubled me were her inaccuracies. She surely did not read the book carefully, otherwise she would not have quoted me as saying that the Sikh religious figure who blessed me in the Golden Temple was some good if Westerners went there a Khalistan leader. Nor would she with realistic expectations, such that have charged that I did not interview a single labor leader or a peasant.

Stars at War In Reagan's Star System

By Joseph Kraft

WASHINGTON — White House gossip about "family problems" and "staff conflicts" obscures a larger truth. Robert McFar-lane quit as national security adviser because he could not endure the star system of presidential management practiced by Ronald Reagan.

His replacement will almost surely not change the system. So the outlook is for more devolution of authority to senior cabmet officers, and further shake-ups in the White House. Cabinet government is the decorous name for the present order. President Reagan leaves detailed management to senior associates. With a few exceptions, cabinet officers have been secure in their jobs. The stability of the cabinet is one of the triumphs of the Reagan administration, and several members have been able to wield almost plenary powers.

The so-called hidden-hand presdency of Dwight Eisenhower showed that such delegation can sometimes work wonders. Mr. Eisenhower raserved his personal intervention for supreme occasions. When they arose, he imposed himself on subordinates with a sure sense of direction. Be cause he had held aloof, his selfassertion carried that much more weight. From behind the scenes he put down Joe McCarthy, stopped the Suez invasion cold, backed away from Vietnam and consolidated the welfare state. He is probably the outstanding postwar president.

But that kind of leadership requires more than poor syntax and a distaste for long days at the office. It demands an ability to pierce beneath the surface of events, to see beyond what is superficial and conventional. It depends on an instinctive affinity with the obscure forces of history and destiny. It is bound up with a feel for what is important and what is transient. It finds expression in a willingness to take unpopular positions for the sake of future gains. Telling peo-ple what they need to know, not whit they want to hear, is indispensable. So is self-discipline.

John Poindexter will probably not even try to assert discipline. Certainly there is little sign that the president wants it.

President Reagan certainly enjoys the opportunity for historic achievement. He can initiate an enduring easing of tension with the Soviet Union. He can put America on the path to steady growth without influence. But does he have the mettle to do it — the historic insight? And the path for the steep and thorny way? So far the question remains open. Mr. Reagan has been splendid at the

MI. Reagan has been spiented at the easy things — undoing the self-doubt left behind by Jimmy Carter; cotting taxes; standing up to Mikhail Gotbi-chev; taking Grenada; capturing tet-rorists; spending money on defense; fighting for law and order and the eradication of drug addiction. He excels at what looks good on the everiing news. He takes the star turns, and the impolite term for the way he does business is: the star system.

But unpleasant business gets shirked. Splits among top advisers on central foreign and economic policy choices go unresolved. Others have to bear the brunt for extracting the marines from Beirut and trying to raise revenues. Those who take on hard tasks without success are often dropped or undermined.

Mr. McFarlane is a disciplined former marine. For years he did exacting duty in national security affairs at the White House. As the top security adviser he resisted the easy accommodations often proposed by the State Department. But his father had been a congressman, and he himself had served as a staff aide on the Senate Armed Services Committee. essentially he held the views of the defense majority on the Hill.

He worked with congressional leaders to build a strategy for stable relations between the two great nit-clear powers. To that end he occasionally lent himself to Secretary of State George Shultz in his hattles against Secretary of Defense Caspir Weinberger and the anti-arms control gang at the Pentagon.

Some time last summer Mr. McFarlane came to the conclusion leaders to build a strategy for stable

So the barons of the Reagan realm - notably Treasury Secretary James Baker in economic malters and Antorney General Edward Meese in social policy — will probably accumulate even more authority. But Mr. McFarlane's exit does not look in this country.

But Mr. McFarlane's exit does not look in this quarter like a final victory for the chief of staff. Mr. Regan apport with Mr. Reagan may be fabulous, and he certainly does not over burden the president with demand for intellectual rigor, but tales of discoving vanity keep coming from the White House. ABIDIAN -- Ivory Coast's economic capital of Abidjan has become one of the African continent's largest and fastest-growing cities.

Described in tourist brochures as "la perle des lagames," because much of the city straddles an extensive coastal lagoon network, Abidjan is bursting at its seams with the flow of job and adventure seekers from the interior and from neighboring Foreign visitors to Abidjan have reacted to the burgeoning city and its Plateau district of skyscrapers with descriptions ranging from "little Manhattan" to "preposterous." Whatever the reaction, it makes a strong impression.

An architect and urban planuer, Michel Sopi Gbeyere, noted that at the turn of the century Abidian was an Ebrie fishing village of no more than 5,000 inhabitants. By independence in 1960, it had grown to 200,000 and the latest estimate put the city's population at over 2 million.

Ivorian authorities have attempted a variety of measures to stem Abidjan's growth, now estimated at 10 percent a year. Reginning in the 1960s, they razed several of shantytown districts, but they have continued to sprout up uncontrollably since. Re-peated examples of this exercise in "summary eviction" have failed to discourage Abidjan's large population of poor immigrants from patching together housing of tin, scrap wood and corrugated cardboard wherever unused land can be found.

Mr. Sopi, whose task it is to help plan the use of overnment resources to "create a maximum number of affordable dwellings," said, "Delicate issues are involved in urban policy decisions, and things are not rendered easier by our financial con-

Economic Crisis Brings Realism To Planning By Government

By Howard French

ABIDJAN — Ivory Coast's economic managers have every reason to feel condemned by past success-es: They must follow an act that will prove all but impossible to match. For two decades following independence in 1960, the country enjoyed one of the world's highest rates of real economic growth, with a 61-percent increase in gross national product per capita.

By 1981 the fortunes of the country that had long enjoyed the de-scription of Africa's "economic miracle" had shifted dramatically. Prices for the country's principal export crops, which typically pro-vide over 60 percent of export revenues, had plummeted, and the country suddenly faced a burgeon-ing debt service load that soon proved unmanageable. After 20 consecutive years of growth, the Ivorian economy slid into steep re-

Economists attribute many of the current economic woes to the folly of the late 1970s. Between 1975 and 1977, world prices for the country's main cash crops, coffee and cocos, more than doubled. With windfall profits and the sudden prospect of oil exports on the horizon, the government embarked on a virtually uncontrolled investment spree, making liberal use of expensive short- and medium-term loans. Unfortunately, by the turn of the decade, Ivory Coast's terms of trade had deteriorated by 48 percent, and both interest rates and the dollar (in which many of the loans were denominated) had begun to soar.

The ensuing debt crisis, followed by two years of disastrous drought, forced a serious rethinking of the country's development strategy. The short-lived opulence of the

CAISSE AUTONOME D'AMORTISSEMENT

For a quarter of a century, the C.A.A. has continued to multiply its relations within the financial milieux and today it benefits from an extremely close network of relationships built up with the international financial institutions.

At the same time, at national level, it has refined the means. and consolidated the channels, through which it taps local savings for the needs of the economy, within which it is solidly established by directing its roots into all sectors.

In 26 years of operation the Caisse Autonome d'Amortissement has succeeded in encouraging and strengthening the confidence of financial backers from abroad. Its internal activities have, at the same time, multiplied and diversified at such a rate that it would not be an overstatement to say that the institution, which in 1959 had only one single loan in its portfolio, has today become one of the main wheels in the economy of the Ivory Coast and a precious tool in the development

Operational Organisation of the C.A.A.

The C.A.A. consists of four technical departments (the Department for the National Debt, the Department for the Manegement of Deposits, the Department for National Funds, the Department of New Funds to Guarantee Loans to Business Concerns in the Ivory Coast), two operational departments (the Administrative Department and the Computer Department) and one Secretariat General coordinating the activities of all these departments, which are under the authority of a Director General who in turn takes instructions from a Management Board presided over by the Ministry for Economy

The C.A.A. in the Sphere of Development

Thus the C.A.A. has a presence in all sectors of national economic activity: energy, construction, public works, agriculture, national education, transport, public health, etc... As a follow-up to the foreign debt being backed by the State from 1973, the C.A.A. has broadened its area of involvement. From a simple manager of the State debt, it has become the organisation responsible for the whole of the national debt, the authorised intermediary as regards financial backing from abroad and an essential part of the Ivory Coast economy. By virtue of the Law No.60-434 of 24 December 1960 and Law No.80/1070 of 13 September 1980, it has become obligatory for national organisations and enterprises and public corporations to deposit their available funds with the C.A.A. The funds deposited are managed in accordance with banking regulations and norms. For this purpose the C.A.A. is registered at the BCEAO under No.B4 of 11 December 1975 as a financial establishment with special status.

Mobilisation of Foreign Funds

Within the framework of its duty to seek out and make available funds from abroad, a mission with which it has been entrusted since its creation, with a view to financing public investments, the C.A.A. has successively approached five categories of sources of foreign financing: obligatory international loans, deferred payments agreements, bilateral or governmental loans, loans from international organisations, loans from private banks.

In order to mobilise foreign resources on terms which are favourable to the Ivory Coast, the C.A.A. has built up numerous contacts with financial backers and continuously follows the trends in international financial markets, a task made easier by the purchase of a Reuter Monitor.

Mobilisation of Savings at

The C.A.A. is not content to tap foreign resources alone. It is likewise concerned with the mobilisation of local resources to finance public investments. The collection of national savings by C.A.A. works through:

Consisting of, for the most part, short term and sight deposits, these resources are used in the form of loans to the

Thanks to cautious and strict management of these resources, the C.A.A. has had almost no need for recourse to rediscounting loans which were granted by it and at the same time has managed to place large loans at the disposal of the Government Considers New Debt Rescheduling

By Richard Everett

ABIDJAN — Ivory Coast must decide this month about how its debts are to be handled from now until the end of the decade. Previous rescheduling agreements only cover debts falling due before Jan.

The government is considering three options, a multiannual debt rescheduling, a continuation of year-by-year rescheduling or pay-ment of its 1986 debt with its own resources. Interviews with Ivorian officials and bankers in Abidjan indicate that the government favors the first proposal, a plan designed to reduce the short-term debt load while financing new growth with commercial bank capital.

Faced with rising debt-service burdens in the early 1980s, Ivory Coast twice renegotiated its debts with the London Club of commercial banks and the Paris Club of bilateral lenders, covering loans falling due from 1983 to 1985.

Ivory Coast now stands at a crossroads for both debt servicing and new investment prospects. Bumper harvests this year of its major export crops and successful austerity measures have given the country the potential to pay its projected $1.2-billion 1986 debt wthout further rescheduling and have rekindled desires to promote new investment, both of which would have been unthinkable sevrealistic plan to ensure that the country's gradual recovery contin-

Planners Seek Diversification Of Export Crops

By Edward Fayah Komba

ABIDIAN - In the first two decades following independence from France in 1960, Ivory Coast enjoyed one of the world's highest rates of economic growth.

The rapid expansion of production of the country's main exports - cocoa, coffee and tropical wood -combined with political stability and an openness to foreign capital allowed the economy to grow at an average rate of 7 percent.

By the end of the 1970s, the country had become the world's leading producer of cocoa and was third in the production of coffee. In addition, Agriculture Ministry offi-cials said that a number of modern industries had sprung up, somewhat displacing wood exports as a source of revenue.

The country's cash crops provide about 75 percent of export earnings of which cocos and coffee accoun for about 55 percent. Despite fall-ing prices in 1977-78, the Agriculture Ministry has promoted exten-sive replanting and has diversified the cash-crop economy - a move that has met with much success. Other crops such as sugar, cotton, rubber, lumber, oil palm and pineapples continue to play a vital role as small-scale cash earners.

The buoyancy of the cocoa and coffee industries, which were established in colonial days, has been

Ivory Coast is not solely dependent on cocoa and coffee. Huge investment has been made in sugar production with a projected target of 600,000 tons this year. Earlier promotional efforts were marred by mismanagement and the fall in the price of sugar.

The World Bank and the France's Central Bank for Economic Cooperation have contributed extensively to the rehabilitation of the sugar complexes in a bid to boost production. Two of the six initial complexes were out of production last year and were consequently converted to cotton production centers.

However, with the current reorganization of the industry, production is estimated to reach 200,000 tons next year to cater to local consumption and for export on a small scale to the European Com-

According to Agriculture Ministry officials, the world recession dealt a heavy blow to the country's third export industry, lumber, by reducing the demand for Ivotian wood and by cutting its price. Only 4.5 million hectares (11 million acres) of timber is exploitable today due to a drastic reduction of the original 16.5 million bectares because of deforestation.

Efforts by the Canadian government and the World Bank to encourage replanting and reforesta-tion are expected to yield good results, and production levels for lumber are expected to reach two million tons by 1990.

Following declining world prices, severe drought and bush fires that brought a sharp fall in production during the 1983-84 season, the government intensified its efforts to promote cocoa and coffee production on a massive scale in the central southwest regions as well as in the entire forest zone. This, coupled with the efficiency of the state-owned company, SAT-MACI, in modernizing production, sharply increased production in the 1984-85 season to 552,000 tons for cocoa and 300,000 tons for coffee, against 457,000 tons and 85,000 tons respectively the previous year.

On the heeks of the best cocoa crop ever (552,000 tons), and a good coffee crop (300,000 tons) as well, the govterrment is urging peasant farmers to prune and replant old underproductive plots of both crops.

So far this decade, 45,000 hect-

Good rains, resulting in excellent food and cash crops, have combined with a successful rescheduling of official medium-term external debt to improve liquidity and provide funds for housing. Political stability continues.

President Felix Houphouet-Boigny, 80, was recently re-elected at the age of 80 for a sixth five-year term of office. The presidential, legislative and municipal elections raised scarcely a ripple of unrest.

The potentially divisive succession issue has again been shelved and a new mechanism approved for picking a successor — at the appropriate time.

The country's continued com-mitment to liberal economic policies and its welcome to foreign private capital was confirmed at the recent congress of the sole political party, the Parti Democratique de Côte d'Ivoire (PDCI).

Will U.S. Plan to Ease Debt Crisis Be Too Late?

securities markets, founded on a belief in the stability of the U.S. and world economy, is to be validated, the greatest threat to the financial system still needs to be solved. That threat remains the huge and still growing debt crisis confronting the developing countries and banks in the United States and elsewhere in the industrial world.

The World Bank has raised its estimate of the total external habilities of the developing countries to $920 billion, from $895 billion, as of the end of 1984. Of that $920 billion, $630 billion is owed to private banks.

opment has occurred to alleviate the threat to the world fi-nancial system and raise the expectations of investors: the change in U.S. policy for dealing with the debt crisis.

As Christine A. Bogdsnowicz-Bindert, a senior vice president of Shearson Lehman Brothers and a former economist at the International Monetary Fund, writes in the current issue of Foreign Affairs: "It took three years of muddling through crises,

At the Seoul meeting of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank in early October, Treasury Secretary James A. Baker 3d offered an "initiative" calling on commercial banks to lend $20 billion to a group of 15 heavily indebted countries over the next three years. The list includes the biggest Latin debtors— Brazil, Mexico, Argentina, Venezuela, Uruguay, Chile, Ecuador, Colombia, Peru and Bolivia—as well as Yugoslavia, the Philippines, Nigeria, the Ivory Coast and Morocco.

He also called for the World Bank and other regional development banks for Latin America and Asia to increase their dis-bursements by roughly 50 percent, to $9 billion, raising the total three-year package to $29 billion. And he proposed a special fund refor Africa, amounting to about $5 billion, to be financed by reflows of past loans to the IMF and World Bank.

that is slowly strangling world economic growth." But DOES the change in recognition by the United States come too late, and is the scale of its proposals big enough to deal with a problem of such magnitude?

The Baker initiative was put together hastily before the Seoul conference without enough time to get other governments and the IMF and World Bank fully aboard. Many officials voiced skepticism and even resentment that the United States was trying to lashion a great initiative without putting up any money itself.

But backing for the United States effort is growing. This week Jacques de Larosière, managing director of the IMF, and A.W. Clausen, president of the World Bank, issued a joint statement

Burroughs Sets Big Goals to Stay in No. 2 Spot

New York Times Service

DETROIT - W. Michael Bhumenthal, chief executive of Burroughs Corp. and for-mer secretary of the U.S. Treasury, is in the unenviable position of heading a $5-billion company that is considered small by its industry's standards. Burroughs is the nation's No. 2 manufacturer of mainframe computers. But its main competition is International Business Machines Corp., nearly 10 times its

"In any other field, Burroughs would be considered a Leviathan," Mr. Blumenthal said. "But in mainframes, we're a rabbit to an elephant. And, in that situation, you have to be fleet of foot."

Burroughs, however, has stumbled of late. Its mainframe sales have been sluggish in one of the computer industry's worst years. Its hopes to double in size by merging with the Sperry Corp. were dashed when Sperry re-buffed Burroughs's overtures. And Burroughs's surprise announcement in October of a substantial drop in third-quarter earn-and caused its stock to plummet. Mr. Blumenthal, however, is setting some lofty targets for the company. He predicts a short-team growth in sales of 13 percent to 15 percent and says the company will more than hold its own against IBM and other competi-

"The reason I think we will succeed is simple," he said in his office overlooking two Detroit landmarks, the General Motors Building and the Fisher Building. "We think our mainframes are better than IBM's."

"We've got a lot of mileage in our product line," said Paul G. Stern, Burroughs's presi-dent, who was lured from IBM by Mr. Bln-Some analysts agree. "Blumenthal spent two years figuring out what to do and another two doing it," said Peter Labe, an analyst with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. "Now the company is at the point where it should

But perhaps the single biggest determinant in its fortunes in coming months is what happens with its problem-ridden Memorex subsidiary. Purchased in 1981 for about $100 million, Memorex, which makes disk drives

IBM and the Japanese.

The disks' design, which is at the core of Burroughs's new thrust to provide systems, instead of single machines, is so sophisticated that the units have suffered many technologi-

Some critics contend that Memorex should be sold. Mr. Blumenthal, however, insists that the problems are now cured and that profitability should return next year. He argues that Memorex provides Burroughs "an

Japan Economy Slows in Period, To 0.6% Growth

TOKYO - Japan's economic growth in the July-September quarter fell to an annual rate of 2.6 percent from 5.8 percent in the pri-

Agency said Friday.
The gross national product, the widest measure of goods and services produced by a country, grew an inflation-adjusted 0.6 percent in the quarter, down from 1.4 percent in the April-June period, it said. At the same time, the agency revised downward, to 5 percent from 5.7 percent, GNP growth for the year ended March 31. The change reflects a base year change to 1980 from 1975, it said. The report attributed the slowdown in Japan's economic growth to sluggish exports, especially to China and the United States.

The Japanese government has set an economic growth target of 4.6 percent for the current fiscal year, which ends next March, but nomists, both in the government and the private sector, have said the target is not realistic.

Many Japanese economists have argued that the Japanese economy tember will likely cause a sharp drop in exports during the current three-month period.

Sumitomo Bank Ltd.'s chief conomist, Masahiko Koido, said entered a period of slowdown indicated earlier in other statistics.

At the same time, he said, it is extremely hard to see an early recovery of personal consumption because personal incomes are showing little increase.

WASHINGTON - The U.S. ci- ment said. vilian unemployment rate fell onetenth of a percentage point, to 7 percent of the labor force in November, the Labor Department reported Friday. The figure matches the lowest rate of Ronald Reagan's

The overall unemployment rate, combining the 1.7 million members of the armed forces with the civilian job force, declined to 6.9 percent in November, also down onetenth of a percentage point.

The agency said that payroll employment rose 180,000 in November, meaning that the U.S. economy has now created 10 million new jobs in the three years since the depths of the last recession.

Manufacturing employment, considered by analysts to be one of the keys to continued economic growth, rose by 30,000 in November. It was only the third increase in factory job growth in the past 11

Despite the improvement, the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said the decline was relatively insignificant, and noted that unemployment was only slightly below the level of a year ago. Civilian joblessness in Novem-

Airbus," he said. Franz-Josef Strauss, the Bavarian premier and an influential member of the Airbus board, said recently that he would welcome a Dornier stake in Airbus. MBB's chairman, Hanns Arnt Vogels, said in an interview in July that the need to share risks of developing the long-range four-engine TA-11 air-craft "could lead to closer Dornier ties to Airbus." Development costs for the twin-engine TA-9 and TA-11 have been projected by industry sources at a total of $2 billion.

Motivating the search for new industrial partners at Airbus, industry sources note, appears to be sharp official U.S. criticism that Airbus is unfairly subsidized by European governments.

A Daimler spokesman declined to provide official confirmation of Mr. Schäffler's anticipated selection to replace Manfred Fischer as chairman of Dornier's management board. The spokesman, Hans-Georg Kloos, said a statement about important personnel changes at Dornier could be expected after Thursday's meeting.

Daimler-Benz acquired a 65.5percent stake in Domier in May, leaving Claudius Dornier, the eldest family shareholder, a 20-percent stake, with the rest held by Silvius Dornier, who is a brother of Claudius, and the state of Baden-Württemberg.

Court to Rule Tuesday on Texaco Bid To Overturn $10.5-Billion Judgment

Compiled by Ove Staff From Dispatches

HOUSTON — A Texas judge will rule Tuesday on whether Texaco Inc. must pay $10.53 billion in damages to Pennzoil Co. as ordered by

State District Judge Solomon Casseb Jr. called a recess Friday after earing arguments from lawyers for the two oil companies on Thurs-

The judge, who can uphold, overturn or reduce the award, said he would announce his decision Tuesday. He can also order a new trial.

A jury imposed the damages, which would be the largest in U.S. corporate history if allowed to stand, on Nov. 19. Jurors found that Texaco had illegally enticed Getty Oil Co. to withdraw from an agreed upon merger with Pennzoil last year.

During the hearing, Pennzoil's attorneys argued that the award was ustified because Texaco's subsequent purchase of Getty, for $10.2 allion, had blocked Pennzoil's access to Getty's huge oil reserves. John Jeffers, one of the lawyers, said, "When you're talking about the loss of one billion barrels, when you're talking about the loss to Pennzoil of the ability to become a major oil company, you're not talking about damages of hundreds of millions of dollars. You're talking about billions of dollars." Pennzoil's lawyers dismissed Texaco's comments that it might be forced to seek protection from creditors under U.S. bankruptcy law if the judgment were allowed to stand. Texaco said Pennzoil had not proved it had a binding contract with Getty, and argued that the damages, at most, should be $500 million, representing the difference between what Pennzoil offered for Getty and what Texaco paid.

reer has spanned three areas — academia, government and business.

Although he appears to relish discussion of business matters, he digresses easily to public policy ises, ranging from the condition of Detroit to the South African economy. Before becoming Treasury secretary, Mr. Blumenthal had been chief executive of Bendix Corp. and is credited with bringing that Detroit company to new levels of profitability. Under Mr. Blumenthal's leadership, Burroughs was shaken up from top to bottom. New managers were brought in, mainly from IBM, and many top executives were given early retirement. About 25 plants were closed worldwide, including eight this year, and the

And the company has dropped unsuccessful products, such as calculators and superscientific computers, and set goals for several niches where it felt it could compete with a broad line of specialized products - primarily in financial services, health care and government services.

Much of this has already paid off. Mr. Blumenthal notes that the company's return on equity rose to 10.8 percent last year from 3.9 percent when he arrived. Revenue per employee has climbed nearly 50 percent, to $74,000, while pretax profit margins have risen to 7.4

rcent from 4.6 percent. Burroughs mainframes — room-sized computers that cost $100,000 to $8 million — can communicate with IBM computers, but are not plug-compatible. That means the two systems can exchange data, which is important for customers who buy from more than one computer supplier, but Burroughs machines cannot run IBM software.

"If they moved it closer to compatibility with IBM, at least Burroughs could sell into a broader market," said Thomas Crotty, an analyst with Gartner Group, based in Stamford, Connecticut.

But Mr. Blumenthal counters "Once you are plug-compatible, you are totally dependent on every move IBM makes. It's no accident

The deskidiary that's not desk-bound

The new IHT desk diary has as much noting space as most standard desk diaries, but condensed into a highly compact portable format.

Bound in luxurious silk-grain black leather, the desk diary weighs in at just 340 grams (12 oz.) and measures 22 X 15 cm (8.5 X 6 in.). No space is wasted on unnecessary maps. bulky economic data, voluminous demographic statistics-yet it has all the space you need for noting appointments. A removable address book, incorporated paper make it both practical and elegant.

year. No need to pack a cumbersome, awkward volume when you travel --- yet you won't need to leave behind one of your critical business tools.

The diary will fit easily into the slimmest attaché case. And its gilt-metal corners, gold page-edges, and French blue Personalized with gilt initials on the cover, this is the ideal desk diary for the executive on the move. The perfect gift for friends, business contacts and associates. Order today. (And please note that quantity discounts are available.)

Agence France-Presse

LONDON — The six-week suspension in London tin trading will emain in force throughout next week, the London Metal Exchange

This success mirrors the growth in Israeli high-tech sales abroad. Exports of locally developed science-based products have grown from $200 million in 1974, about 21 percent of total exports excluding diamonds, to $1.9 billion in 1984, 30 percent of total exports.

"Our parents' generation had to deal with many things not related to business, like wars and building an economy from scratch," Mr. Misholi said. "We have had the opportunity to become real professionals. We learned in two years in the States what it took our parents

20 years." Mr. Mlavsky, the expert on high-tech companies, had a similar ex-planation of the way that Israel's new entrepreneurs differ from their elders. "The older generation subsumed their ambitions in the com-mon goals of state-building," said Mr. Mlavsky. They were brought up on the notion We need an industry,' not 'We need an idea.' "

The young entrepreneurs have been able to do something about their ideas. Along with their higher educations, they learned management commanding brigades or battalions in the army. They have spent time abroad studying their terrospective outcomers and learning prospective customers and learning how "real" business is done before introducing their products.

Elders Says Its Offer

LONDON - Elders IXL Ltd. of Australia said Friday that its £1.8-billion ($2.6-billion) bid for Allied-Lyons PLC had lapsed after the British government said it was referring the offer to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Commission investigations into large takeovers normally take about six months. In the meantime, Elders' bid will automatically

John D. Elliott, chief executive of Elders, said earlier Friday that he was surprised that the bid had been referred to the commission and that his company was reassess-ing its position. At a news conference last month Mr. Elliott said that if the bid were referred to the ission, Elders would maintain its interest in acquiring Allied-hinder competition. The bid for Allied-Lyons, a London-based food and drink company, was the largest ever for a British company when it was formally announced in October. It has since been overtaken by another bid one of £1.86 billion by Argyll Group PLC, a food retailer, for Distillers Co., the biggest producer of Scotch whisky.

Elders, a brewing, farming and finance group, is only a quarter the size of Allied-Lyons, one of Brit-ain's top 20 companies and its second-biggest brewer. The bid raised concern in banking circles because it was financed by bank borrowing rather than through the company's OWN resources.

Mike Geering, an analyst with London stockbrokers James Capel & Co., said that a month ago the bid probably would have gone through without a problem. But the the financing of the bid as the rea-son for the referral to the commis-pressure on the government to slow son for the referral to the commis-sion. As a result of this policy, innumerable letters, memos and reports flowed back and forth, and fortunately the files have been preserved. They are now in the Archives of Performing Arts at the University of Southern California, and from them Rudy Behlmer has been able to piece together

Behlmer is a television producer and director who has several books on Hollywood to his credit, notably "Memo From David O. Selznick." His new compilation, while comparable to the Selznick volume, is even more revealing as a slice of movie history. time we hear directly from a wide range of senior studio personnel and in some cases the stars, though normally their agents did the talking for them. The book opens a little earlier than the title suggests, with a letter written in 1929 giving notice that after the current production the studio will have no further use for the services of Rin Tin Tin. He was one more casualty of the coming of sound. It is only after 1935, however, that the cache begins to vield its treasures.

Much of the correspondence registers difficulties and dissatisfactions of one kind or another. Bette Davis is unhappy with her billing. Errol Flynn is unhappy with his wig. Edward G. Robinson is doing nicely in the filming of the Michael Curtiz movie "The Sea Wolf," one memo notes, until the scenes where he gets into philosophical discussions with the character played by Alexander Knox; then he "starts dropping his 'r's,' he becomes very 'New Yorky,' and I wish Mike would watch this very Behlmer strings pearls together with skill, and wherever necessary supplies some annotation. The glimpses behind the scenes range from advice on how to improve the box-office prospects of "Jeze-bel" to the stremuous publicity plans for the opening of "Dodge City" in Dodge City, Kansas. There are some decidedly intelligent contributions — an amusing report, for example, on how to cope with George M. Cohan during the making of the Cagney movie based on his career, "Yankee Doodle Dandy." (One of the anthors was the associate producer, William Cagney, the star's brother.) Provisional plans for casting movies provide some of the best material. The effect is often rather ghostly, as images of what might have been are conjured up: John Barrymore instead of Monte Woolley in "The Man Who Came to Dinner;" George Raft instead of Humphrey Bogart in "The Maltese Falcon."

Although "Warner Bros. (1935-1951)" provides a convincing and detailed picture of the way the studio worked, it seems likely that the brutalities that crop up sometimes in its pages loomed larger at the time. People don't always write the way they talk, even in office memos. Still, the book does succeed in conveying a whiff of the battlefield, of what E. M. Forster called "the world of telegrams and some."

what E. M. Forster called "the world of telegrams and anger."

Among those on record protesting against the prevailing spirit, the most eloquent was Raymond Chandler. He is represented by a letter in which he explains that during the week he received no payment while working on a script, he had been ill, and that he had caught up by working over the weekead: "What strange delicacy of conscience induced me to give any weight to this, I wonder. It must have been that I thought I was dealing with people as precise as myself in these matters."

spokesman said.

Zivojinovic, ranked No. 66 in the world, slipped several times as he was serving the opening games of the third set on the soggy grass center court. Finally he called out to the referee, Peter Bellenger, "Do you want me to break a leg or what?" and the match was halted. The 6-foot-6 (1.98-meter) Zivojinovic, who overpowered the second-seeded John McEnroe in five Of Overtime sets Wednesday for the tournament's biggest upset, did not play nearly as well against Wilander, 21, the third-seeded Swede who is trying to become the third man to win three straight titles.

Wilander, apparently untroubled by a brace on his right elbow, served seven aces in the first set. In the next set Zivojinovic, 22, appeared confused about what tactics to use against the deadly accurate Swede, and Wilander finished off the set with an ace.

But by then the rain had started to fall more heavily.

Zivojinovic repeatedly had umbeaten streak in overtime to 18 clutched his back, possibly because games — six triumphs and 12 ties of having played 104 games in the last two days, and although he volleyed with great power he lost the second set in 24 minutes, having failed to hold one service.

Capitals Win Grand Battle

By Robert Fachet

Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — Scott Stevens' birthday present to his coach, Bryan Murray, lacked only gift wrapping Thursday night when his shot from the left point at 1:29 of sudden-death overtime gave the Washington Capitals a 3-2 victory over the St. Louis Blues.

The victory, on Murray's 43d birthday, extended the Capitals' since they last were defeated in Winnipeg on Feb. 19, 1984. The Blues, losing for the first time in their last nine overtime games, had been the National Hockey League's masters of the exrestored in 1983. This was only their third loss in 33 such games.

The Capitals also closed to within five points of the Patrick Division lead as the Philadelphia Flyers, by a 6-3 score, lost in their Spectrum to the Toronto Maple 12, 1980.

The Capitals and Blues had been stalemated for more than 48 minutes when Stevens wound up, then eaped up with delight as teammate Craig Laughlin blocked the goaltender Rick Wamsley's view the puck went into the net.

Laughlin and Wamsley played together with Montreal's American Hockey League team in Nova Scotia, and Laughlin had some fun talking about his part in the winning goal.
"I just stood there and said,

How do you do? and he said, 'Fine,' and then I said, 'Good-bye,' Laughlin said. 'Tm very good friends with Walmer, but I was glad to see that one go in.

"I didn't think it was going in. I thought it would hit me or hit something else, the way it usually does. Usually, I stop, but this time I decided I wouldn't just stand Asked how he liked his birthday present, Murray said, "They could have done it earlier. But we're confident when we go into overtime. We know we're not going to give up very many chances, so it gives us a lot of confidence.

"We change a little bit. We try to put the puck in the opposite corner and make their defenseman turn and go after it. Then we break for the net. Locker made a heck of a

1 advantage in shots. Then, over the last 10 minutes of regulation, Washington's Pete Peeters had a couple of tough calls as the Blues had a 4-1 shot margin while both teams played cautiously.

Triple Crown Races to Be All or None

NEW YORK (NYT) — Beginning next year, the only way a thorough-bred can be entered in a Triple Crown race is by being entered in all three races, the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes, it was announced Thursday by the management group representing Churchill Downs, Pimlico Race Course and the New York Racing Association, which conduct the races.

According to Chick Lang, general manager of Pimlico, which is host to the Preakness, supplemental entries to either the Preakness or Belmont Stakes, which follow the Derby, will no longer be accepted. A $600 nomination fee will be due Jan. 15, 1986, with an additional $3,000 due March 17. The added purse money for each race will be $350,000 in 1986. Braves to Add Drug Clauses to Pacts

ATLANTA (AP) - The Atlanta Braves will include drug and alcohol testing clauses in future guaranteed contracts, said their general manager, Bobby Coz, because "when you guarantee that much money to a player, you want to make darn sure he's going to be physically able to perform." The Braves became the 10th major league team to say it will require such clauses in guaranteed contracts, joining Los Angeles, San Diego, Philadelphia, Montreal and San Francisco in the National League and California, Kansas City, Boston and Cleveland in the American League.

From November through June about three million eels are slaughtered every month for their skin, Kim said. In the summer, produc tion almost halts because the skins spoil in the heat.

The eels are caught around the Korean peninsula or imported from waters near China and Japan. We have the markets overseas but we just don't have enough eels,"

The South Korean government controls eel exports to conserve the resources. Supply is also limited because of a shortage of workers to clean the eel skins — they earn 150,000 won (about $169) a month —and of skilled workers who stitch the skins together and who earn 300,000 won a month. Se-II was established in 1978 after three years of experimenting with skins. Now, Kim said, there' are so many foreign requests for orders, it would take 10 years to meet them all. Remembering one order for custom-made steering wheel covers, he said, "We'll make anything people can use.

"There's an old Korean saying: If you have a purse made of snake skin, your money will return," he said. "So we hope eel-skin purses will become good-lnck signs all over the world."

Merchandising 'Dr. Ruth'

By William E. Geist New York Times Service r EW YORK — "People!" yelled an overwrought Bloomingdale's security guard. "You got to buy the board game to see Dr. Ruth. And that's finai!" He preently radioed for reenforcements in Stationery, where hordes of Dr. Ruth fans threatened to overrun his posi-

They lined up to receive antographs and give thanks. "Thank you for changing our lives," said a woman from Louisiana, and Dr. Ruth, always the thecapist, patted the back of her head. "You saved our marriage," said a Texan who swore that he and his wife had made the trip just to see Dr. Rnth in person. "I love you, Dr. Ruth!" screamed a young woman from Baltimore. "I bought Monarch Avalon" - the manufacturer of Dr. Ruth's board game -"at $4 and sold at 16."

Helaine Suval, a merchandise manager for Bloomingdale's, re-marked reverentially: "We believe in Dr. Ruth, nationally, totally." Then Dr. Ruth was whisked up to the executive offices to discuss a proposed line of Dr. Ruth greeting cards.

Dr. Ruth Westheimer, the 4foot-7-inch German-born sex therapist who now lives in Manhattan, is a corporate conglomerate named Karola (her first name) Inc. She has divisiona: broadcasting commercials, films, board games, book publishing, newspaper syndication, a one person speakers bureau with four speeches to choose from, and she still does private counseling 15 hours a week.

Her Sunday night radio show is carried on 78 U.S. stations and she appears on cable television five nights a week. Her videocas-sette of home sexual instruction has just gone on sale. Her second sex book was released at about the same time as the board game. She makes radio and television commercials for Dr Pepper, Smith-Corona typewriters and

The elfin 57-year-old sits at the WYNY-FM radio microphone, her legs not quite reaching the floor, and she looks for all the world as though she is about to tell us in her cheery middle-European accent how to make a nice apple strudel. But when she opens her mouth, she sends forth on radio and television the most explicit instructions on sex.

Still remarkably Tentonic after about 30 years in the United States, her accent has become something of a trademark. She dropped some money into the cup of a blind beggar outside Bloomingdale's after her appearance and said: "Derrur you go!" The beggar replied: "God bless you Dr. RRRRRuth."

Five years ago, WYNY gave her a 15-minute segment in the black hole of broadcasting, after midnight. A casual offer of Dr. Ruth T-shirts one night drew 3.500 orders. The show now runs the network.

Her television program, "Good Sex," began as a 30-minute show, and is now a one-hour program named "The Dr. Rnth Show" on cable five nights a week with celebrity guests such as Burt Reyn-olds, George Burns, Joan Rivers, Cyndi Lauper and Mayor Edward I. Koch of New York. The show started being broadcast in England this fall.

She dispenses frank and de tailed advice, leavening it with a dose of conventional morality she believes in relationships; she disapproves of promiscuity.
AIDS will probably reduce promiscrity, she says.

Advertisers say she has great appeal among "middle Ameri-cans." Dr. Ruth has always described her program and her audience as being "as American as mother's apple pie." Only one station, in Atlanta, has canceled her radio show because there were objections to content. Representatives of Kellogg's Corn Flakes approached her recently about doing commercials.

She flits in and out of New York, lectures on dozens of campuses, including Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Montana State, as well as speaking to a convention of rabbis and a gathering of the Junior Leagne in Indianapolis. Her usual fee is $5,000 to $10,000, as compared with the $0 to $25

she was getting four years ago.
Her first book, "Dr. Ruth's Guide To Good Sex," has sold 169,000 copies and is available in German and Spanish, with French and Japanese translations in the works. "First Love, A Young People's Guide To Sexual information," has just been re-leased, and a third book, "Dr. Ruth's Guide for Married Lovers," is to be published next year. She writes a monthly column for Playgiri magazine. On Valentine's Day, she is to begin writing two newspaper columns a week for King Features Syndicate.

The board game, Dr. Rnth's Game of Good Sex ($24.95), is manufactured by a company that specializes in military-strategy games for the Pentagon. "I'm going to have to compare this to Trivial Pursuit," said a Baltimore distributor. "The orders overshadow anything we've had in our company's 100-year history."

She plays a principal role in the new film "A Woman or Two," a comedy by Daniel Vigne that stars Sigourney Weaver and Gerard Depardieu. She was so thrilled about being in a movie that she told her representative, the William Motors Agency, to back off on salary demands.
"You think I don't love this?"

she said, diving into a limousine that contained her mobile hairdresser, a makeup person and her husband, Fred, a telecommunications engineer for Citibank, who was carrying a sandwich for her in a brown bag. They have two children, Joel. 22, a student at Princeton, and Miriam, 29, Dr. Ruth's daughter from an earlier marriage, who is working on a doctorate at Columbia.

This woman, this Dr. Ruth, is big big very big "a businessman said before making his way through the crowd and stooping over to speak furtively into her ear. "Popcorn," he said. "Think about cans of Dr. Ruth pepcorn. We would have sex questions on the outside and the answers inside. It could be big," he said. "Very big."
